

CHAPTER 9

Limitation of the Study

Although a sincere and careful effort is given to derive each and every aspects of the thesis, still there is some loopholes arise. These are mentioned here under-

1. Number variables should have been more.
2. The number of respondents here, is really so scant as to take an empirical conclusion.
3. Non linear programming could have been more befitting to capture it's variability and performance over a productive period.
4. The application of time series analysis could have offer a pattern of sociological perception of monsoon.
5. Time constraint has really become a barrier to justify the quality of data collected from the research locale.
